WAUCHULA MAN ADOPTS AN INEXPENSIVE WAY TO DIE.

After Trying Jumping From a Train Insane Man Jumps From Top of Tree.

WAUCHULA, Nov. 20—Luke Lauer killed himself last Friday by jumping from a tree after he had leaped from a moving train. He had been adjudged insane and he was being taken to an asylum when he watched for a chance to jump from the train. By the time the train was stopped and a search made his body was found under a tall pine tree which he evidently had climbed and then threw himself to his death.

The new rural school bus made its appearance on the streets last Tuesday and was inspected by a large number of people. There were various comments. When some saw the woman at a distance they supposed it to be the convict cage which on Monday had its iron floor sawed through by some escaping convicts. Others said it reminded them of old times when they were passengers in a "Black Maria." The general opinion is that the wagon is liable to prove top heavy in a nor'easter while rounding a curve and spill the precious contents. But this is all conjecture. The bus is built over a Ford body and is furnished with upholstered seats to accommodate about 20 children. It is all closed in and furnished with several windows which can be opened or closed, according to the weather. The body is black with yellow letters showing its purpose. The wagon is being given a trial by the school trustees. It was furnished by the county school board.

Rev. Rollin T. Chafer, advanced pilot of the Southfield Bible Conference of 1920, spent several days in town during the past week, and last Sunday morning occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Chafer was here to see if he could induce some of our capitalists to build a set of bungalows for rent to conference patrons during the two week's session. As far as we can learn no one "fell" for the proposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clay of Norfolk, Va., arrived on Thursday. Their pretty bungalow on South Prospect street had been made ready for them by friends, and it looks as if they would be in position to enjoy their winter stay with us. Mr. and Mrs. Clay were guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Tillinghast for a day or two after their arrival. All here were delighted to see Mr. and Mrs. Clay, as they are among the most popular winter residents of the place.

Pretty little Lake Como village has reason to expand with pride over its Red Cross achievement in the recent drive. Lake Como is affiliated with the Crescent City branch of the Red Cross, but this year its work should and must be separated, for the reason that Lake Como went 100 per cent over the top and Crescent City is lagging. Mr. H. C. Gates personally made the canvass for members at Lake Como, and he says that there isn't a person in that place above 12 years of age who is not enrolled this year in the Red Cross. We doubt if there is a town in Florida that can beat this record.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bills and Miss Evans went to Palatka last Wednesday morning on the steamer City of Jacksonville, where they received their new Buick car, in which they drove hom in the afternoon, accompanied by Tom Russell.

Four convicts saved their way through the county convict cage last Sunday night and made their escape. The chief engineer of the get-away was a young white convict whose work was driving the convict truck. He operated with tools taken from the truck and concealed about his person. The bottom of the cage is iron and it is likely that they worked quietly all through the night. The other three escapes were negroes. Two of the negroes were captured that same night near Barberville, Volusia county, whither they were tracked along the highway. The white boy and another negro have not been captured, although Foreman Grainger says he is on their track and will soon have them. The white boy has been seen near Barberville, and had exchanged his striped suit for civilian attire of a free man. He is the young man who was sentenced to six months for stealing tickets from the St. Johns River toll bridge at Palatka, and is thought to be an irredeemable thief. He is but 19 years of age.

The home of Mrs. James on Market street was entered last Saturday afternoon during her temporary absence, and $40 in money taken. She saw the man at the house on her return, but he was outside and made some excuse for his presence which was accepted. Later in the evening she discovered her loss and then it was she associated the man with the stolen money. The man she saw was one Jim Lindsey, who had only that day been discharged from the logging camp of the Palatka Dry Dock Company which is being operated up the lake a few miles by Mr. J. D. Doyle. Doyle says the man was too mean to keep in the woods. Lindsey left here the same evening on the train, and investigation shows that he spent more money in Crescent City stores last Saturday afternoon than he drew in pay. Mrs. James is an elderly lady who lives alone and it is said that her loss falls particularly heavy upon her at this time.

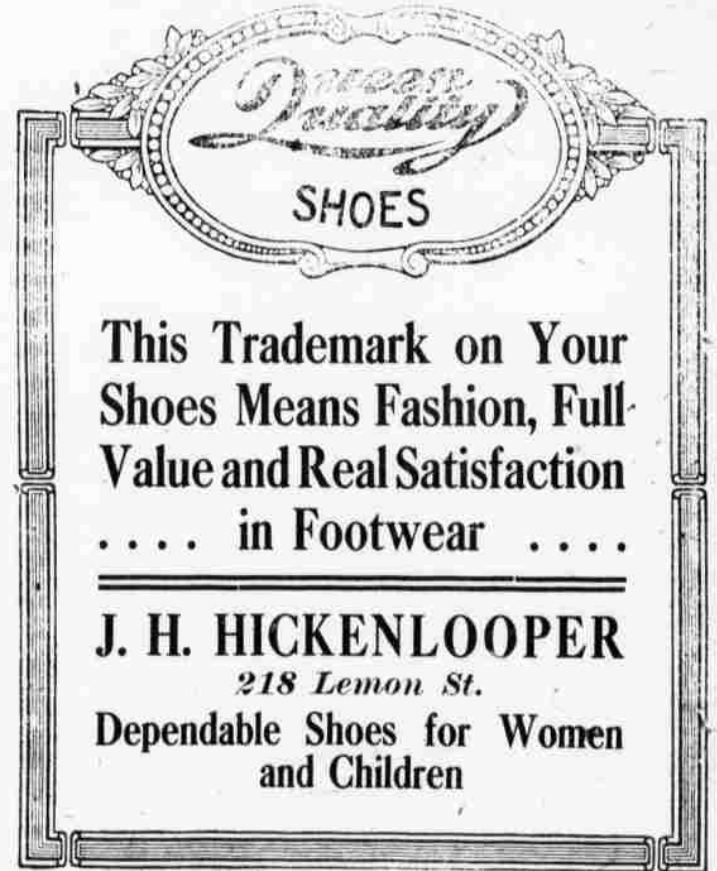

Former County Commissioner W. C. Alvers, has been quite ill with influenza at his home in Sisco for the past two weeks, but is now getting better. His old friends throughout the county will learn of his illness with regret, but will be rejoiced to know of his improved conditions.

EARNEST COMPANY

WALLACE REID AT THE ARCADE

Many young men nowadays are often heard to remark something along this line:

"Well, I am not going to work all ways. Pretty soon I'll marry some girl whose daddy don't know what to do with his dough, and then it'll be easy sledding."

But all such young men had better see "You're Fired!!! at The Arcade today before being too sure of their prospects.

In this picture Wallace Reid appears as Billy Deering, a young man who wanted to marry Helen Rogers, daughter of Gordon Rogers, millionaire railroad owner. When Billy broached the question to father, he got in answer the shocking proposition that he must work for three months without being fired, before the necessary consent would be given and that in the meantime daughter mustn't know of the arrangement. Billy, giving business as an excuse to Helen, sets out to fulfill what is now his main mission in life. It might be said that he gets the girl at the finish of the story, but not without a lot of adventures that promise to keep any audience laughing. By living up to dad's requirements he almost lost the love of the girl, but an exciting incident and a lot of explaining at the finish, fixes up things with all parties concerned.

VETERAN ENGINEER TAUGHT KING TO RUN ENGINE.

(By United Press.)
MOORHEAD, MINN., Nov. 20—John Kilbane, veteran engineer on the Great Northern railroad here read with interest every press count of the visit of Belgium's royalty to America.

When King Albert, then a prince, visited America in 1898 and made a trip over the Great Northern as a guest of J. J. Hill, Kilbane taught the royal passenger to run an engine. He says Albert was as apt pupil and quickly learned to handle the throttle, lever and air brake and watched the track with solicitude.

The latch string of the Brussels palace is ever out for Kilbane, King Albert has assured the engineer in messages.
